RIFLE PRACTICE IS PLANNED

Officers Promised Those Who Would Join That Bad Getting on in War Times Will Not Be Included.

DISAPPOINTING to those who have been interested in a military camp at Fort Sill, it was announced yesterday that no new recruits will be accepted by the government, and that all the older men will be encouraged to return, with surplus, when 300 leave for the campaign.

After returning at the winter, in Oklahoma, when the men had been sent to the front, the men were sent back to the states, and the government has been asked to let the older men be encouraged to return, with surplus, when 300 leave for the campaign.

In an address to his men Major Bell urged that each man do all in his power to help recruit the men sent on to a strength, but when the men returned, he said, they were gathered together. An executive committee, too, was organized by Major Bell and the members were in order that Tulsa may be represented at the encampment that will be held in the fall.

The work of the encampment will not be in the nature of strenuous training, he explained. The men are not to return to camp in the open, day after day, but will receive general instruction in the science and technique of military training.

Fully half of the time will be spent on the rifle range and the men will be given a thorough course in small arms firing. The fact that the men now have plenty of recreation has not been overlooked, and officers of the local units assure every man in "riving good time." There will be none of the hard work that characterized the regular army camps during the war, when men and arms will be cut short. It is also to make the trip a pleasurable one, as well as beneficial.

Special orders have been received of the local army authorizing the enrollment of men who have had previous service for the term of one year. These men will be permitted to attend camp and will receive regular army pay while there. A limited number of freight envoys of men without previous service will be taken for the one year term, but these men will not receive pay at the encampment.

Major Turner Roark of Fredrikburg, inspector general Oklahoma national guard, was present at the meeting last night, and will remain in the city until the encampment.

not stand it any more. Come with us and we will correct it."

First steps in the federal government's attempt to reduce the high cost of living were taken today with the inauguration of a plan for the sale of $125,000,000 worth of army food stocks direct to the people with every postmaster and mail carrier over the country acting as a salesman.

Distribution of the surplus food in this manner was requested by the house of representatives and details were worked out at conferences between Secretary Baker, Postmaster General Barbour and Representative Kelley of Pennsylvania, author of the house resolution.

While this program was being put into effect, Senator Williams had before him a statement from the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, which declared that "conscientious profiteering by the great interests who have secured control of all the necessities of life" had brought about such conditions that the engineers felt that they must demand

Nathan Strauss

Strauss showed that the Jewish community was to be ready to defend its rights from the Nazis. He also informed the government that all the older men will be encouraged to return, with surplus, when 300 leave for the campaign.

With the arrival of the men, he said, the government would be better able to meet the needs of the people. The men would be the backbone of the world, and the older men would be the backbone of the nation.

According to the spokesman, Strauss is pledged to have the men with the aid of their families and friends, help the government to meet the challenges of the world.
